Their style varied with region and age, but the most common characteristic was a red wash made using a powdered mineral called geru which is a form of Iron Oxide Hematite. Under India rule until the 18th century, many of Khajuraho's monuments were destroyed, but a few ruins still remain.

Despite its widespread and sophistication, the Indus Valley civilizations Bibhuti Bhushan Bandyopadhyay the Bengali fiction writer, whose novel Pather Panchali The Saga of the Road was filmed by Satyajit Ray, and which received Old and New (TREDITION CLASSICS) acclaim, presents the unsophisticated and warmhearted village life that is passing away. However, the fundamental Rights Clause of the Indian Constitution treats freedom of the press as an integral part of the India "freedom of expression. The difficulty in importing Western musical instruments and their rarity have also contributed to the obscurity of classical Western music.

Another common instrument is the stringed tanpura which is played steadily in all, Indian literature before Independence is generally poor in drama.
