question this raises is whether religion is therefore the direct cause of misogyny –the aversion or distaste for people of the female sex, including belittling, sexual objectification, sexual violence, and discrimination against women–or whether male-dominated religious practices are the product of broader gendered inequalities and societal norms outside of religion Zwissler, ? If you have ever had the chance to look at stars through an actual telescope, not the internet pictures, taking the time to just look at some random name-unknown group of stars, it is fascinating.
