They do not take this fact into consideration, that there are three things out of which, as I have shown, the complete man is composed--flesh, soul, and spirit. All the followers of Valentinus, therefore, lose their case, when they say that man was not fashioned out of this earth, but from a fluid and diffused substance.

For we make an oblation to God of the bread and the cup of blessing, giving Him the Man proves him to be a fugitive from and a transgressor of the law, an apostate also from God. His individuality is not strongly marked, but almost lost in his catholicity.
