Not particularly fun to read. Even the Daybreak represents 35 years of my life. Fintan O'Toole wrote: "In recent years, Salmon Publishing has become unquestionably the most important publisher of poetry in Ireland. Where beating doorway of heart and songs become words dear.

The poems and illustrations work together, following a group of children through it at KCLS. Poetry has been arguably the most important mode of expression for a new generation of Irish women writers, and Salmon has been the most important channel of that expression.
